The Madonna is seated on a large throne built against a tree, which appears to be a laurel, and which projects considerably forward and overshadows the throne. Between the branches there appears the clear sky, so pure and beautiful that the tree seems to be a real and living one. At the right of the seated Madonna and Child are Saint Leonard, the patron of the church where altarpiece was placed, and Saint Catherine. At her left are Saint Augustine and Saint Apollonia. Below the tocky ledge on which the Madonna's throne rests are three child angels singing and playing instruments. The painting is called Madonna and Child with Among the contributions to the de
